Fire Resistant Files

Imagine your home or office being destroyed by fire. At temperatures of over 1000° F, entire structures, furniture, and fixtures are consumed indiscriminately. The devastation of your belongings and environment is compounded by the realization that the important documents you require in an emergency have been destroyed as well. KORDEN's family of Underwriters Laboratory (UL) classified fire resistant storage products are designed to help you begin restoring your home or office by protecting your valuable documents and records from the ravages of fire.

All files carry this label from Underwriters' Laboratories' signifying Class 350 one-hour "Record Protection Equipment classified as to Fire Resistance (formerly "Class D")," or Underwriters' Laboratories' Class 350 one-hour "Record Protection Equipment classified as to Fire & Impact Resistance (formerly "Class C")."

Only UL approved fire-resistant products can assure you of the level of protection necessary to safeguard documents in the event of a fire. KORDEN offers two levels of record protection equipment recognized by UL as both fire-resistant and fire and impact resistant. The UL label is an assurance that your file's interior will not exceed 350° F while subjected to external temperatures of 1700° F over a one hour period. To earn the UL label, files endured the following tests:

- a one hour fire endurance test
- an impact test (only for impact rated files)
- an explosive hazard test.

KORDEN has been providing equipment to store and protect valuable documents and negotiables for over 50 years. Our commitment to providing quality products and unsurpassed service assures your KORDEN fire resistant files are constructed to the highest standards, designed for years of trouble free service.
